

M.Sc. Allan Gonzalez

International Regulatory Analyst, Latin America Office

FDA

Bachelor in Food Technology, Master in Occupational Health with emphasis in Environmental Hygiene. He has extensive experience in private food companies in the areas of quality assurance, production, occupational health and environmental management. In addition, he has worked in university research, in the management of wastewater treatment plants and is an instructor in food safety issues. He currently works as an International Regulatory Analyst in the FDA's Regional Office for Latin America, where he has participated in inspections in the area of both food and medical devices, and has provided training in workshops on good agricultural practices, on the process of exporting food and medical devices to the U.S., and on the Food Safety Modernization Act. He is a member of the National Commission against Illicit and Counterfeit Products of Costa Rica, and is a member of the Liaison Committee of the Food Industry Nucleus of the National Learning Institute of Costa Rica.