

Eng. Gonzalo Ibáñez

International Regulatory Analyst, Latin America Office

FDA

He has worked as an expert in food trade at FAO, World Bank, ECLAC, UNDP and IICA. He was Chief of staff from the Ministry of Agriculture of Chile. He worked as Agricultural Attaché of Chile to Brazil, India and U.S. He has carried out work missions in some thirty countries in America, Europe and Asia. He has several publications on agriculture and international food trade. For the last 11 years he has served as FDA International Regulatory Analyst, based in Santiago, Chile, and working with all South American countries.

Agricultural Engineer from the Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile, MSc. in Agricultural Economics from the Université Catholique de Louvain in Belgium. Mastering in Trade Policy from Kennedy School, Harvard University. He has diplomas and certificates in: Business Administration and Negotiations and Conflict Management both from Mendoza Business School, Notre Dame University; Food Safety Risk Management, from the Joint Institute for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition (JIFSAN); and Food Science, from The State University of New Jersey (Rutgers University). He is Lead Instructor of the PSA (Produce Safety Alliance, Cornell University - FDA), Lead Instructor in Preventive Controls and the Foreign Supplier Verification Program, both from FSPCA (Food Safety Preventive Control Alliance, Illinois Institute of Technology - FDA)